OVERVIEW

Jarden Home Brands, a subsidiary of global consumer products giant Jarden Corporation, has a product portfolio of more than 120 thriving brands including Ball Mason Jars, Yankee Candles, and Crock-Pots. JHB was built on the values of honesty, integrity, expediency, quality, and innovation.

Their existing space in Daleville, Ind., did not support these principles. Sixty-four-inch tall workstations dominated the landscape. The environment lacked warmth and energy, and was detrimental to collaboration and teamwork. Employees found the environment stark, and segregated. It was not uncommon for employees to go days, or even weeks, without seeing or interacting with the person who shared their panel spline.

The decision to move their headquarters from Daleville to Fishers, Ind., gave JHB the opportunity to start fresh. The new headquarters would include 45,000 square feet of renovated office space directly connected to an existing 600,000-square-foot canning jar distribution center.

The office environment was designed to create spontaneous and surprising moments of interaction using an honest, but modern, aesthetic. The challenge? To bring out the best in JHB’s people, free them from limitations, and inspire innovative thinking and collaboration. The design incorporates a variety of dimensional and dynamic spaces that create a sense of energy and passion while retaining a casual, comfortable aura. The overall space fosters open collaboration, but it also provides quiet spaces for individuals to do focused work.

Existing ribbon windows along the exterior bathe the workspaces in natural light. And skylights, which were added to the inner space, create an open, welcoming atmosphere that feels personal to each occupant. The strategic use of color and texture brings life and depth to the space, which absorbs and returns creative and productive energy. It is a space that supports innovation and the innovative people who work within.
